Two "White Ways" For Ocean Beach

With a splendid ornamental lighting system assured for Newport avenue from Abbott to DeFoe streets, petitions are being circulated for making Voltaire street a "white way" through the heart of Point Loma peninsula, from Chatsworth boulevard to the ocean front. One petition calls for the widening of the pavement from Chatsworth to Mendocino boulevard to full width of the street, installation of sidewalks and curbs and ornamental lamp standards. The pavement to be widened is that laid a few years ago only 20 feet wide. From the western terminus covered by the petition, Voltaire is now paved full width. From that point westward another improvement petition asks ornamental lamp posts, so that the lights will be placed all the way through. This route is the main one to the beaches. Besides widening the narrow pavement on Voltaire, it also is planned to widen the pavement on Chatsworth from the Loma Portal tract past the high school to Voltaire. Sidewalks and curbs along these streets fronting properties marketed by the Mills organization are installed as part of the tract improvements, but the remainder of the property presented will be improved on the 10-year bonding plan.

FIREPROOF GYMNASIUM FOR ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY

Plans have been perfected for the construction of a steel and tile gymnasium on the college campus at the Army and Navy Academy in Pacific Beach.

NEW $3,000 RESIDENCE

C. J. Schumacher has obtained a permit for the construction of a stucco cottage and garage, to cost $3,000, at 4659 Bermuda avenue. Walter C. Lott is making an addition, costing $1,500 to the residence at 4492 Long Branch avenue.

NEW $5,000 MODERN HOME

A permit has been issued to Mary P. Hoover for the construction of a modern stucco residence and garage, costing $5,000 at 2133 Chatsworth boulevard, Pantages Terrace addition.

HURT AT HOSPITAL

J. R. Holly of Muir avenue, met with an accident last Wednesday while at work as a carpenter in the nurses' home connected with the Mercy hospital. In wielding a knife, the blade slipped and severed an artery in his right arm. First aid was given and he was taken to the hospital. Mr. Holly is at home now, getting along quite nicely.

WANTED!

ONE THOUSAND MORE
INDIVIDUAL HOMES NEXT YEAR FOR OCEAN BEACH

In every section of the beach district there is evidence of a steady and healthy growth in realty values and building operations are going forward on a most encouraging scale. With the completion of the proposed ornamental lighting systems and the furthering of the great paving program, wonderful progress can be achieved with the construction of a thousand more individual homes next year in Ocean Beach. Let's make that a slogan! Co-operation and boosting will prove beneficial to all while the population will soon double in size and again and again.

Bouquet From Mr. C. H. Daly

Ocean Beach, Calif., Nov. 16, 1926.
Dear Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Smith:
"The Beach News,"
Ocean Beach, Calif.

A five-year-old baby! Well, I must say! it's a healthy looking kid! Five years ago, when "The Beach News" stuck its nose up from below the horizon—what did it behold! Something like a deserted mining camp. No paved streets, no sidewalks, no ornamental lighting of our streets. The old brindle cow browsed on our ill kept vacant lots, the smelly goat was strongly in evidence. Yes, and we had the braying donkey and the old grey mare a roaming our tin-can alleys. Also, grass was literally growing in our streets.

And now—what do we behold! "Old things have passed away—all things are becoming 'new.' The sound of the hammer, the buzz of the saw. Nature has done much for Ocean Beach in advance, giving us this glorious and salubrious climate. And now, man has decided to assist.

We may still have an occasional donkey and a "kicking ass" in our midst—but we can tell the world! We have the goods—and nothing can keep us off the map—where we belong.

"The Beach News" is now above the horizon—it has been a leading and fighting figure for our civic betterments. May the writer congratulate you on your Fifth Anniversary. And if I may use the quotation—
MORE POWER TO YOU.
Sincerely,
C. H. DALY.

NEW BUILDING RULES

ON PLANS AND PERMITS

New rules for the San Diego Building Department were announced this week by City Manager Rhodes. In the future, residents seeking permits from this department must first have sewer permit, water permit and building plans indorsed by the plumbing department. The new rules are meant to eliminate much confusion and trouble that has arisen in the past.

CHANCE TO GET JOBS

AS MOTOR COPS

The City Civil Service Commission announces an examination to be held Nov. 24 for motorcycle policemen. Candidates must have served as patrolmen for at least one year and have knowledge of state and county traffic laws. On Nov. 27 the commission will hold an examination for general clerk.

DR. N. F. ADAMSON RETURNS

TO RENEW PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE IN BEACH DISTRICT

Following an absence of a year or more at their northern home in Washington, Dr. and Mrs. N. F. Adamson, have returned to Ocean Beach, where Dr. Adamson will resume his professional practice. He has opened offices at his residence in the Del Monte Cottages, No. 11, on Del Monte avenue, and will continue his specialty of nerve tracing and hydrotherapy, paying particular attention to Swedish manual movements and massage. His phone number is Bayview 0294-J.

Beginning Our Fifth Year

Editorial Pronouncement

With this week's issue "The Beach News" begins its fifth year of successful publication as an independent weekly newspaper devoted to promoting the progress of the beach sections of San Diego and the entire Point Loma peninsula.

This birthday anniversary finds us feeling as fit as the proverbial fiddle for the furthering of every worthy cause and unselfish endeavor toward the upbuilding of the glorious beach community, wherein we most happily abide, own our property holdings, pay taxes, vote, and hope to continue being a helpful and prominent part and parcel until the final call to celestial shores!

To our hundreds upon hundreds of faithful friends and highly valued patrons we extend our most sincere gratitude for their loyalty and generous support, with the assurance that we will continuously strive to merit their good will, confidence and friendship throughout each succeeding year.

Keeping ever true to the policy announced in its first issue, "The Beach News" is now and will always be a persistent and consistent booster for enhancing the welfare and encouraging the prosperity of the beach districts, while adhering strictly to the concluding paragraph of our salutatory in Vol. I, No. 1, which is just as applicable now as it was then and will bear repeating, thusly:

"The Beach News" is not controlled by any clique, faction, creed, or special interests. By way of paraphrase, it is well to say that it is a weekly newspaper for, by and of our own home people. It is never a chronicle scandaleuse. It is kept clean, truthful and wholesome and, in the recording of community doings and sayings it is made gingery and peppery enough to keep everyone alive to the prosperity, progress and best interests of this blessed, heavenly-favored seashore section of sunny Southern California!

Again, we greet you and thank you!

POINT LOMA CLOSES FOOTBALL SEASON

The Point Loma high school football eleven closed their first football season in the county league with a defeat from Coach Petty's heavy Escondido squad by a score of 25 to 0. The Point Loma lineup for the Escondido game was: Sam Lipsett and Jack Walters, ends; Clifford Harrison and Paul Markel, tackles; Paul Driscoll and Frank Buss, guards; Roy Justice, center; Jack O'Mara and Mervin Clark, half-backs; Clifford Wells, quarterback; Theron Cline, full-back.

League Standing

In the league standings La Jolla and Point Loma are tied for fourth place, while the strong Sweetwater eleven are the county champions, having easily defeated Oceanside 57 to 0. Coronado, losing but one game this season, is second, while the Grossmont eleven whipped Mountain Empire to cop third place. The remainder of the squads finished as follows: Escondido, Oceanside and Mountain Empire.

Basketball season will start at Point Loma high about the first of next month, under the supervision of Coach William Foote. This year Point Loma is expected to have a good chance for the county championship.

The library had a very attractive display of posters for Children's Book Week. All the seventh grade students wrote book reports on their favorite book. Elizabeth Canaga received honorable mention for her report on Ivanhoe.

The advanced art classes under the direction of Miss Jane Gale, have been very busy for the past week working on posters for the Community Chest.

Superintendent Cooper visited two of Miss Pickett's Spanish classes last week. He expressed his pleasure at the progress that they are making.

Mr. Barnes, head of the biology department, reports that there is considerable increase over last year's enrollment of students taking biology.

The students of the beginning class in bookkeeping are now taking rapid calculation on the comptometers which belong to the commercial department. Mrs. Gillespie, head of this department, reports that she spent a delightful week-end at Los Angeles and visited the University of Southern California.

The high school secretary reports thirteen new students in the last two weeks, the majority of the new students being seventh and eighth graders.

Girls' Athletics

"Our Gang," captained by Agnes Frisius, and Nancy Holmboe's team, both basketball teams having never been defeated, played a fine game last Friday. Nancy Holmboe's team won with a score of 24-4. Fifty girls are taking corrective gym voluntarily in the mornings, 8:00 to 8:30.

Dr. Martha Mahan has been at Point Loma giving heart and lung examinations to the new girls.

Grades came out Monday, Nov. 15. The girls who did the best work in physical education this quarter are Peggy Lyman and Nancy Holmboe. Those who progressed more this quarter than any of the other girls are Louise Doetschman and Adeline Rabbits.

Mr. Dildine, the manual training teacher of Point Loma school, has been absent since November 11 because of blood poison in his left hand, which was injured while working in the wood shop.

Mr. Swenson's fifth period public speaking class is busy this week preparing speeches on the merit system. Next week the class is going to give speeches about the "Community Chest."

The second period home nursing class is striving to accomplish some fine work so they can obtain the "Red Cross Nursing Certificate" at the end of this semester.

Mr. Easton's chemistry class has fifteen pupils, who have been engaged in making safety matches which give a good flame and really work. Mr. Easton also teaches ninth grade business training to a class of 32 students. This course is an introduction to office work.

Miss Fenton recently took a number of slips, nightgowns and canned fruits, made by her sewing and cooking classes, to the poor children.

The senior B's have ordered their class rings. Fourteen members in all will be wearing their rings in about a month.

Catherine Hayden, a member of the reporter's club, has returned to school after an illness of five weeks.

The beginning Latin class has thirty-five students. It is very unusual for such a small school as ours to have a large beginning class in Latin, and Miss Gibson, the teacher, says that this shows an increase in interest in Latin.

Kind Words By Dr. Adamson

Ocean Beach, Nov. 18, 1926.
Editor "The Beach News":

Coming to Ocean Beach five years ago, I found it a very small place. There was no newspaper, and also a lack of many, and much needed commodities. At just that time Mr. Kirk Smith had the vision and courage of his convictions, so "The Beach News" was launched.

Being one of the first subscribers to the paper, I am surprised at its marvelous growth, and think there is reason now, from the firm foundation laid by "The Beach News" for the rapid growth of a beautiful and prosperous seaside city, which has many natural attractions not equalled in any other part of the world.

It is with great pleasure that I extend congratulations to Editor Smith as a constant booster for Ocean Beach and helping most materially in its advancement. May continued success attend his lively and interesting newspaper.

Most respectfully,
DR. N. F. ADAMSON.

SEND ALONG NAMES

FOR THAT COURT AND GET THAT FIVE DOLLARS

Boys and girls have an opportunity all this month for securing the $5 gold piece offered by Mr. Jackson for a suitable name for his court of six cottages at Cable street and Santa Monica avenue. Read the advertisement in another column and send to "The Beach News" one, two, three or a half-dozen titles for the owner to make his selection. And don't forget your own name and address. We will publish the winner, and you may be the lucky one.

CARL SCHRODER ALWAYS ON THE JOB

Owning his own residence at 4840 West Point Loma boulevard and other valuable property in Ocean Beach, announcement is made by Carl Schroder that he repairs radio sets right here and doesn't take them to San Diego to be fixed. He believes in patronizing home industry and is a true-blue beach booster. He is an all-round expert mechanic and his phone number is Bayview 0161-J.

JAMES R. RAMSEY SAYS

"FORD BUSINESS IS GOOD" AT PACIFIC BEACH

J. R. Ramsey, the Ford Dealer, located at Cass boulevard and Gaarnett street, Pacific Beach, says that "Ford Business is Good." A 30.3 per cent increase in business in this state over that of last year is recorded. Mr. Ramsey is constructing a new building at Cass boulevard and Emerald street, which will be ready for occupancy about December 1st, and will have all the latest machinery and equipment to handle Ford repairs. Further announcements regarding the opening date will appear in these columns later, at which time an invitation will be extended to Beach residents and their friends to call and inspect the new building, and get acquainted with Mr. Ramsey and the personnel of his organization.

The city engineering department announced this week that the cost of a proposed seawall at Ocean Beach would be $51 a lineal foot for the estimated distance of 4,400 feet, from the Silver Spray plunge to Mission Bay bridge. It was stated that the high cost given in the estimate was due to the type of wall desired by those directly interested in the proposed project. The seawall at Mission Beach is estimated to cost $40 a front foot. The petitioners from Ocean Beach request a substantial wall, with comfort stations, ornamental lighting system and a 20-foot wide sidewalk. The petition will be referred to residents and property owners for further action.

PATENTED PILING TOO

COSTLY FOR SEAWALL

At a special meeting of the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce held recently, the chamber went on record as requesting the city to eradicate from the specifications of the Mission Beach seawall the clause requiring the use of a certain patented piling. City Manager Rhodes, who was present at this meeting, stated that he considered the patented piling to be superior to the ordinary kind of concrete piling now in use, inasmuch as it is waterproofed and is, presumably free from corrosion. It was stated that the cost of using the patented process alone, aside from the material and labor involved, is 50 cents a lineal foot or $7 per pile. This in addition to the cost of materials and labor would make the increased cost of the wall something between $50,000 and $100,000.

HENRY EULBERG SELLS

"STEELCOTE" RUBBER AUTO ENAMEL AT O. B. GARAGE

The attention of autoists is called to the new "Steelcote" rubber auto enamel now on sale at the Ocean Beach Garage on Newport avenue. The manufacturers positively assert that it is an enamel that contains real rubber and that it will never crack or craze. It is also stated that hot water, soap, ammonia or acids cannot dull its brilliant lustre, while there's nothing to equal it for beauty and durability. Henry Eulberg can give interesting details concerning the many attractive colors obtainable and the ease with which they can be blended. "Steelcote" may be used by housewives for enameling furniture and interior woodwork as well as by autoists for beautifying and providing a protective coating for their machines.

NEEDED!

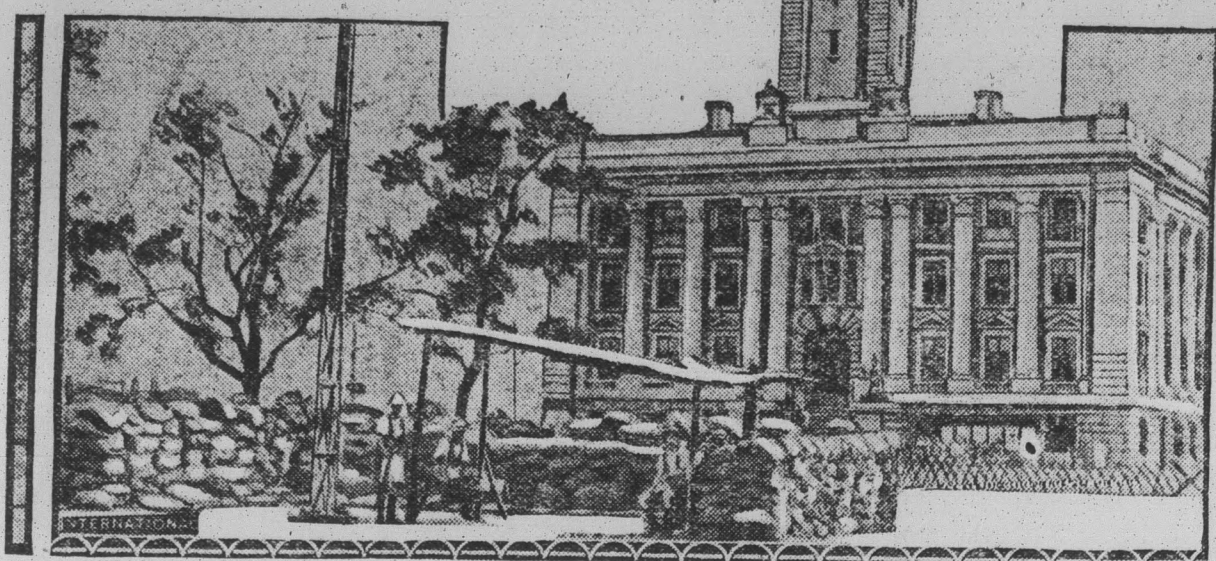

MORE ARC LIGHTS

THROUGHOUT RESIDENTIAL DISTRICTS IN OCEAN BEACH

Let's have lights and more lights! The business districts are progressively preparing for a fine ornamental lighting system, yet the residential sections still lack light in dangerously dark spots. Arc lights are greatly needed at many intersections. For instance, Cape May avenue is without a light from Abbott street almost to the top of the ridge; Naragansett and Cable is in darkness and there are a dozen or more surrounding intersections where residents should have the protection and benefit of a uniform arc light system. And a light is wanted at the O. B. entrance to the Mission bay bridge. Let's get 'em! And the sooner the better.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

A root cutter to be used in the harvesting of sorghums is now being designed and developed by Professor E. J. Stirnman, a member of the agricultural engineering staff. John P. Conrad of the agronomy division is collaborating. Formerly the cost of harvesting sorghums was high, as it was necessary to do all the cutting by hand, and then thresh the crop with a stationary thresher. Tests are now being made with the Dwarf Milo variety, seeking to improve the design of the machine. The principle of the cutter is to go down the row of Milo, cutting the roots, thus shutting off the water supply and causing the plant to dry up. The roots form a sod which holds the plant upright in the ground. After the plant dries from ten to fourteen days a combined harvester and thresher can be used directly on the plant.

Though various varieties of orchard trees, apples excepted, in Shasta county, yielded a light crop this season, oak trees out in the open have produced an abundant crop of acorns. In fence-enclosed pastures and on the open ranges in the mountains the ground beneath the branches of oak trees is carpeted heavily with acorns. Old-timers say they never saw the like before. Acorns are an important food for hogs, but farmers have been going out of the hog business of late years and there are now really not enough hogs to eat the abundant crop of the oaks. Hog raisers, remarking that acorns do not fall all at once, say there are enough acorns on the ground now and yet to fall from the trees to provide ample feed for hogs for five months to come.

People whose ages totaled thousands of years attended the annual reunion of Sonoma County Pioneers, held in Santa Rosa, featuring a dinner and the telling of pioneer days by many of the old timers. A group of "covered wagon babies" were given special attention and were guests of honor. Joseph M. Talbot, who was born in Bennett valley more than seventy years ago, and John S. Taylor, 98, told of his experiences in Nevada county mines, seventy-six years ago. The pioneers concluded the festivities by dancing the Virginia reel. A number of the dancers were over 70 years of age and took the steps like youngsters.

Sacramento harbors, or did until recently, the most frequently arrested man in California and perhaps in the entire country. The reputed champion in trips to jail is John J. O'Day, Sacramento valley character who has attained a certain reputation as a sidewalk orator. Police estimated that O'Day has been arrested as a vagrant at Sacramento and in surrounding cities at least 500 times in the last few years. Holding that O'Day rides in the police patrol oftener than many men ride in taxis, Police Judge Frank L. Gafney ordered him out of Sacramento for the next 60 days.

A delegation of grape growers from all of the vineyard sections of the state met in San Francisco recently, to discuss a proposition to revive the California Grape Growers' Exchange, which went out of business a year ago. Other propositions pertinent to the growers were on the program also, among the principal ones being the question of new markets. The exchange was established several years ago to create and maintain new markets for juice grapes, but lapsed finally because of a dearth of membership.

Proving that obstacles mean nothing to him once he has made up his mind to do something, Professor N. E. A. Hinds of the Geology Department of the University of California is conducting a survey of mountain country in the vicinity of Redding, Weaverville, and Heroult, almost 300 miles from Berkeley, and carrying on his regular routine work at the same time. He drives to the scene of his survey after his classes on Friday and returns in time for his classes on Monday.

Will C. Wood, state superintendent of public instruction, announced appointment of Miss Ruth Aiken, assistant secretary of the State Commission of Credentials, to assume charge of teachers' credential work in the Los Angeles office of the state educational department. The work was superintended until recently by Mrs. Carrie Parsons Bryant of Los Angeles, a member of the state board of education, whose term has expired.

At a meeting recently of the farm bureau officials of region No. 7, which was attended by officials of Lassen, Shasta, Tehama, Glenn, Colusa, Yolo and Solano counties, the following resolution was unanimously passed: "Be it resolved: That we go on record as being in favor of amendments Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 28 and that we vigorously oppose amendments Nos. 8, 20 and all tax exemption measures.

The dairy judging team of the Modesto Union high school is the best outfit of its kind in all of these United States. Eight of its members have been killed and nearly 100 injured since the state traffic force was organized three years ago, according to a statement given out at Sacramento by Will H. Marsh, chief of the state division of motor vehicles.

The Woodland Public Library, a Carnegie institution, is to have a children's room as the result of the recent action of the city trustees in providing a tax levy sufficient to provide the same. The cost will be $5,000. The stock capacity also is to be increased.

A celebration has been set for November 11, marking the completion of the Melones reservoir built by the South San Joaquin and Oakdale irrigation districts, in co-operation with the Pacific Gas and Electric company for the storage of water for irrigation purposes.

Reductions amounting to almost half former rates in some instances are announced for Stockton by the Board of Fire Underwriters, effective on all policies written after June 1, 1926. The reductions are the result of extensive fire protection improvement effected by the city administration.

The Association of University of California Women, San Francisco Bay branch, has joined in the statewide fight being waged for passage of Proposition No. 10 on the November ballot, which provides for the appropriation of $6,000,000 for college buildings at Berkeley and at the southern branch in Los Angeles.

Through the agency of cooperative marketing the olive industry, which began a decline eight or nine years ago, is gradually being built up again, and is once again headed for a sound footing. This is the declaration in a statement issued in Sacramento by L. C. Sears, field agent of the California Olive Growers, Inc.

The carpentry and farm mechanics classes of Tulare Union High School have started construction on a new $10,000 building on the high school campus. This building will be the home for the agricultural and farm mechanics classes and will be located just east of the auto mechanics shop on the corner of the athletic field.

A plea for a definite state reforestation program was made before the third annual conference of home builders and subdividers at Del Monte by Mark Daniels, San Francisco landscape engineer and former superintendent of national parks. The conference was in conjunction with the state realty dealers' convention.

A short course for deciduous fruits and grapes will be held at the Davis college during the week of November 29th to December 4th. The program is outlined to cover the essential practices in growing the two crops and lectures, demonstrations and studies will be conducted by some of the best authorities on fruit growing on the Pacific Coast.

The Exchequer dam of the Merced Irrigation district was turned over to its owners a short time ago by the builders, as entirely complete. With the shipment of 62 carloads of material and the finishing of minor repair and alteration work not included in the contract, the builders have wholly completed their task. The dam which cost $5,000,000 stored water for irrigation use this year.

That the public is awakening to an appreciation of the importance of meat inspection is evidenced by figures compiled by Dr. George Gordon, in charge of meat inspection of the California department of agriculture, showing the growth of this service for the past four years. In 1922, Dr. Gordon's report shows 147,173 animals inspected. In 1923 this was increased to 208,659, in 1924 to 535,953, and in 1925 the figure reached 562,693. Inspection has increased considerably during 1926 and the report for this year will show a marked increase over previous figures.

Wedding in High Life

A physician was praising the late Dr. John Duncan Quackenbos.

"Quackenbos," he said, "was keen-witted. As we were motoring one day we passed a fashionable church. A crowd was gathered about the church door, a red carpet was spread over the steps and superb foreign limousines were driving up.

"What's going on there, I wonder?" I said.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

NEW COATS FEATURE CUFFS; COLORFUL CREPE FROCKS

TO THINK that cuffs, mere cuffs, could be so interesting! But they are. The newer-designed coats are proving it too. Surely nothing could be more attractive in the way of an ultra-smart coat than the one in this picture and the picturesque pirate cuffs which it boasts have much to do with the dash and go of its style. We are to have more and more of the pirate and the cavalier cuff, so fashion tells us.

Aside from the cuffs, which give this coat so much chic, there are other details which tell the world the dernier black broadcloth, perhaps trimmed in velvet or just as likely in smooth supple fur, shaved lamb being favored.

Banded and bordered in padded quilted design gives a handsome effect in which monotone coloring is maintained. Smooth beige or gray cloth thus worked provides an effective coat theme.

Velvet! It is a magic word sounded into the uttermost limit of fashion's domain. Velvet used as a trimming has become nothing less than a fashion craze. At the rate the vogue is spreading, ere autumn far er from Paris. There is, for instance, the handsome velvet applique arranged in strappings of military precision and as to the color of this coat, here, indeed, is the very latest described, for blonde and beige shades are the talk throughout all fashionland. The fact that the hand-appliqued velvet and the kasha cloth from which this coat is made, are perfectly matched light beige, stamps this model with authoritative style. Furthermore, the dainty shoes worn with this adorable coat carry out the same beige or blonde color scheme. It has come to be most important that one's shoes match or at least harmonize with the costume. To this end stylists are featuring navy kidskin shoes with suits and street frocks of that same shade while brown footwear in all its vari-progresses, scarcely an up-to-date wardrobe will there be, which does not include a colorful or a black dress, as it may please, lavishly trimmed in self-toned velvet. An outstanding trimming treatment is the skirt tiered with straight or circular velvet ruffles. The effectiveness thereof is set forth in this picture of a claret red crepe frock boasting row upon row of velvet ruffles. The flaring ruffle of velvet on the sleeve makes the whole gown akin.

Very often the tiers are cut circular and sometimes just the reverse is expressed in that flat velvet bands are placed so as to simulate wide tucks. Borderings of velvet which extend at each side of the front opening, from neck to hemline and then around the bottom of the dress are fashion-ations is considered quite the extreme of good style.

Reverting to the subject of coats, the better models, as instanced in the picture, attain their distinction and difference through subtle detail. Perhaps it is the intricate seaming or an unusual cuff, a novelty pocket, or some other cunning manipulation of the cloth which disturbs the silhouette not at all yet arouses that consciousness of superior style.

HOW THE PILGRIM MOTHER

Kept Her Family in Good Health

A statue to the Pilgrim Mother was recently unveiled at Plymouth Rock, Mass. Through her we honor every pioneer woman who endured privation and hardships that a nation might live. Shoulder to shoulder with her husband she built a home in the wilderness and reared her sturdy sons and daughters. She cooked and sewed. She spun and wove for her growing family and when they were ill, she brewed potent remedies from roots and herbs—such roots and herbs as are now used in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Massachusetts woman writes: "I was all run-down, with no ambition. I was tired all the time. Sometimes I would be in bed two or three days at a time, and the doctor would have to give me something to quiet me. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have had wonderful results from it. I felt better after taking the second bottle, and I am never without it in the house now. I have told lots of people about it, and they say it helps them, too. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. J. W. CARRICHER, 2 Hammond Street, Cambridge, Mass.

The Retort Discourteous

It is related that George Bernard Shaw, a few days after his seventieth birthday, was roped into a drawing room party of a rather highbrow nature, at which the special attraction was a violinist. Said the hostess to Mr. Shaw, after the violinist had rendered one or two numbers: "Well, Mr. Shaw, what do you think of my discovery?" Replied Mr. Shaw: "I find in him a great resemblance to Paderewski." A painful pause. Then, "But, Mr. Shaw, Paderewski is not a violinist."

"Exactly!" snapped G. B. S.—New Yorker.

BALBOA THEATRE

Imagine the kick you'll get in comparing the football game of 1899 as opposed to that of 1926. The different stadiums, uniforms of the players and costumes of the spectators are all good for a laugh in Richard Dix's latest picture, "The Quarterback," playing at the Balboa Theatre for one week, starting Friday.

See "The Quarterback," Richard Dix has never had a better vehicle for his engaging personality, and new record for laughs.

Fanchon and Marco are presenting one of the most stupendous stage presentations ever seen in San Diego, with a cast of eighty-five performers and three bands. The costumes, alone, total a cost of $10,000. A pyramid 40 feet in height, and at the base, the width of the entire stage, forms the background and center of action in the gorgeous spectacle of color and music.

Warren Proctor, renowned tenor, is the featured artist in the big production. Proctor's voice has been acclaimed by leading critics as one of the finest of any native American.

Angelo Armentio, the world's fastest tumbler, and an Arabian by birth, is co-featured with Warren Proctor. Also enlivening the action of the prologue are trapeze and aerial acrobatic artists, specialty dancers, singers and instrumentalists.

CABRILLO THEATRE

Picturegoers who have clamored for a picture of a different sort will find one this week at the Cabrillo Theatre where Corinne Griffith in her latest First National picture, "Into Her Kingdom," is the attraction for one week starting today. Miss Griffith was never more beautiful, never better cast and never better supported.

Raymond Godden is entertaining with a pleasing program of organ numbers. Kinograms and other short subjects round out the excellent bill.

HANDSOME REMEMBRANCE FROM BOYS' CLASS

Mrs. G. N. Vaughn was presented with a beautiful Scofield bible last Sunday at the O. B. Baptist Church from the class of boys she has taught for four years, and which now have been promoted into Mr. Craig's class. With some pleasant words of presentation Rev. W. S. Dunn told of Mrs. Vaughn's faithfulness to her class and their appreciation of her and of how she had worked with the boys, and of what had been accomplished through team work. Mrs. Vaughn thanked the boys and said how she would always love and appreciate the beautiful gift from them.

Greeting Cards—Froide—Bacon St

ENTERTAINED AT FIVE HUNDRED

Mrs. M. J. Mehling of Muir avenue, entertained the Tuesday afternoon card club last Tuesday with three tables of 500. Delicious luncheon was served. Those invited were: Mrs. John Frye, Mrs. H. J. OLD JIM MADE HIS STRIKE

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman.)

"WELL, seeing as we've got your father now we can't exactly turn him out into the desert," said little Mrs. Ross, pursing her lips. There was a stubborn set to her features which Edwin Ross knew from of old. "But we had to take the old man, Bessie," argued her husband. "We couldn't let him go to the poorhouse."

"He'd have been a sight better off there than mooching round the shack at eighty," answered his wife. Ross sighed. He knew his wife was not naturally hard, and yet of late her antipathy toward his father had been growing more pronounced. She had, as a matter of fact, warmly seconded his proposal that when they pulled up stakes the old man should accompany them.

At twenty-five Edwin Ross, a year married, had suggested to Bessie that they should quit their life of hardship in the western city and try their fortune in the newly-irrigated lands. They had been lured by an unscrupulous land agent, fabulous crops, he told them, could be raised there. They moved, with their little capital of five hundred dollars. And their disillusionment began as soon as they got out of the train and stared about them at the barren land.

Irrigated it was, after a sort, but the agent had said nothing of the heart-breaking spade work that was needed to bring the dam water through the conduits and into the desert soil. The labor, to town dwellers, was terrific. And during the six months that had passed Bessie had been changing.

The old man, Jim Ross, mooching about the camp, had little by little become unbearable to her. Himself an old gold prospector, he had found nothing in all his life except a few worthless pockets; yet he had never ceased to dream of the day when he would make his fortune by some lucky strike.

There had once been rumors of gold in those hills, but nobody had ever found any. Day by day the old fellow would set out hopefully with his assaying pan, and every evening he would return with his hopeful stories, which so jarred his daughter-in-law's shattered nerves. Edwin Ross looked on hopelessly. He knew that their future was obscure, a dozen times there had entered his mind the sinister temptation to make an end of himself, and still he toiled doggedly, trying to raise that first crop which was to pay the mortgage on the little place.

It was a day later that the storm broke. Old Jim Ross had come back, late for supper, with the usual story. "I think I'll try my luck over at Bald Man's Hill tomorrow," he said, in his weak, senile voice. "I never seen a territory that looked so promising. There might be a million dollars' worth of gold in that bend of the gulch."

Bessie stood up and faced him, a regular virago, her shattered nerves tense and quivering.

"I've heard those stories before," she cried. "For the Lord's sake go and get your gold, you useless old fool. Go and find it and don't come back till you've got it."

The old man looked at her, aghast at the sudden outburst.

"Why, Bessie," he faltered, "I didn't know as you was so against my finding gold. I tell you, he went on enthusiastically, "there's gold in them hills. Yes, sir," he continued, "there certainly ought to be a mint of gold there, if we could only get it."

But Bessie had burst out of the room, crying, and the old man, shaking his head in perplexity, went slowly to the outhouse where he slept.

"Edwin," said Bessie later, "the old man will have to go. That's all there is to it. He's terrible! Talking about his gold when heaven only knows how we're going to live the next year. And all our money sunk in this place!" She pressed her lips together vindictively. "I won't stand for his talk of gold!" she cried. "He'll have to go to the poorhouse."

Edwin said nothing, and that evening Bessie, all tears and penitence, begged her husband's forgiveness. But old Jim Ross had heard, as he stood uncertainly in the entrance, where he had come hoping to find out what the trouble was.

So it was himself! He had never guessed that he was in the way. Despite his years, he had done such work as was in his power. He had helped Bessie with the dishes—chattering the while about the gold; he had talked of "pockets" and produced samples of likely quartz while she fumed inwardly and said nothing. He had never dreamed that he was a nuisance.

The old man's pride was stung to the quick. All night he lay upon his bunk in the outhouse, pondering over the matter. At last he reached a decision. He had spent a hard and lonely life, and now, at eighty, he was quite willing to take up the threads again.

That morning Bessie and Edwin found a roughly scrawled note upon the table.

"I'm going, children," it ran. "I'm going to leave you for a while until I've located that quartz, or maybe a bed of shining nuggets in the gulch

I was speaking of. Then I'll come home. I guess you won't grudge me the little bag of flour and the matches and blanket I'm taking with me."

They stared at each other. The old man must have been gone long since, for when they searched the flat of the plains he was nowhere in sight.

"I'll go after him," said Edwin. "No," answered Bessie. "He'll come back at nightfall, when he's tired, and maybe it'll be a lesson to him."

But nightfall arrived, and there was no sign of the old man. Nor on the following morning. Bessie was now thoroughly alarmed.

"Edwin, you must go and look for him," she said. "You know which way he went?"

Her husband nodded. "It's twelve miles distant," he said. "I guess I can walk it and back by night."

"I do hope he has come to no harm," said Bessie. "He must have heard me when I said what I did. I—I'm sorry, dear. When he comes back I'll never lose my head again like that."

Meanwhile old Jim Ross was industriously grubbing among the boulders of the gulch. He spent the entire day there. At night he slept in the river bed. Next morning, awakening late, he stood up and peered out across the plain. Some sense, long latent in him, told him that there was another human being approaching him.

He looked out to see a man walking across the sand and alkali. At once a fear came over him. This man was coming to rob him of his cherished gold.

Purtive as a fox, he crept along the gulch, out of sight of his son, whom he had not recognized. Over his shoulder he carried the sack full of his precious stones. He knew that, once clear of the gulch bed, he could make his way among the mountains and be well on his way homeward before the newcomer had come upon the place where he had been.

He chuckled as he strode manfully across the plain, oblivious of the burning sun. He covered mile after mile, borne up by the knowledge that fortune, which he had evaded so long, lay hidden in that bag. And thus he staggered into the cabin late at night, an hour before Edwin's return.

"I found his tracks," cried Edwin, at the door. "But he's gone—he's gone—"

"No, he's here," answered his wife sourly. "He played a fine trick on us, Edwin. He's in his bunk, asleep. In the morning I'm going to send him back by train."

The return of the old man, babbling about gold, had awakened all her resentment. Her husband saw that it would be useless to argue with her. But in the morning Bessie's anger was unchanged. They found old Jim seated with his sack at the kitchen table. He was taking stones out of it and arranging them along the edge.

"Well, children," he began, "I reckon the old man fooled the pair of ye. There'll be no more drudging now, if I know the value of what I've struck in the hills. Look at them stones!"

He held one up to Ross and indicated the tiny yellow flecks among the quartz.

"It ain't much," he said, "but wait till we get our stamps up here. That'll assay two ounces to the ton."

"This is too much," cried Bessie. "Now, listen, old man! I've had enough of this talk of gold!"

Old Jim pulled another stone out of the bag and looked at it with twinkling eyes. It was a yellow stone, more yellow, dull, rich, and unmistakable, and at least as large as a pigeon's egg.

"Maybe this wouldn't make ye a bracelet, honey," he said, holding it up before her. "Nor this," he added, pulling out another. He shook out a dozen more from the bottom of the bag.

"Why—it is gold!" shouted Edwin. "If it ain't," said Jim, "I'll never prospered for it. The gulch is full of nuggets, enough to buy our machinery for stamping when the alluvial's ended. We're rich, children, and we'll go back East, and Bessie'll have fifty new gowns, and a house and lot, and—and I guess I'll be the king of the poorhouse."

"Father!" sobbed Bessie, kneeling beside him. "It's yours. Take it all. We deserve none of it after the way we treated you."

"Why, that's all right, honey," said the old man, looking at her in mild surprise. "I ain't had nothing to complain of. It was the work, I reckon, sort of put an edge on you. You see, children, a good woman's like gold—she's there, somewhere, only sometimes she takes sort of—sort of looking for."

Porpoises Heed Call

of Native Islander

A native residing on the northern end of Butaritari, the northmost island in the Gilbert group in the Pacific ocean, is possessed of the ability to call porpoises out of the sea, up into the shallow water along the beach where they later are left stranded by the receding tide. The method, followed by the caller of the porpoises is to retire inside his thatched hut, where he sleeps for two or three hours, while no word is spoken in the village. Awakening, he runs out of his hut shouting and his cry is taken up by other natives. The porpoises swim shoreward until they reach water so shallow that the natives have to lift and push them along. When the tide goes out the fish are distributed among the natives.—Arthur Grimble, in Wide World Magazine.

It is asserted that certain kinds of bacteria convert fertile soils into alkali wastes.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE INDIANS

Earle was going to be taken on a trip and stay for several months in a little place far away from his home, where there were Indian settlements nearby.

New Indian Suit.

His father needed a real rest, and so they would all live out-of-doors and be sensible, so his father said, and come home healthy and refreshed.

Well, Earle certainly would like to come home with thin, wiry strength such as an Indian had, and he would like to come home with the power of moving through thick underbrush at camp without a sound, and he would like to know how to paddle a canoe silently.

For more than anything else Earle looked forward to seeing Indians and living near them—real, live, moving, breathing Indians. He would get a new Indian suit, too. They would help him. His friends certainly called him a lucky boy!

They envied him but yet they were glad that one of their crowd was going to have such a trip, for how splendid it would be when he got back. He would be able to reorganize their games, and he would be able to tell them just how the Indians did act and move and if it was correct the way they sprung out from trees when they tried to be just like the Indians.

It would mean so much to their games to have a real authority with them, and Earle would never patronize or act spoilt or mean even if he did have this great advantage over them. Earle was not that kind. He just considered he was lucky, too, and he, too, looked forward to all he would be able to bring in the way of true facts to the home boys.

At last the great day came that they started. Everyone saw him off. It was a long, long trip, but every bit of it was interesting. There were forests and lakes and rivers and miles and miles of wonderful country where no houses were to be seen. Earle felt as though he were going exploring. There were prairies. Then suddenly the prairies seemed to be looking up above the level, flat, even earth and to see what was going on.

And there were the mountains. Miles and miles of them, rocky, snow-capped, wild. Earle saw a moose drinking water from a small lake only a short distance away.

After yet another day they arrived at the settlement where they were going to spend their holiday.

They were in a valley where there were actually more Indians than white people living in these parts.

But Earle could hardly believe his eyes when they were pointed out to him at first.

They did not wear regular Indian suits—only when there were special dress-up occasions, he was told.

They were ordinary suits when they came into the wee village, though they always did wear gay scarves around their necks and waists, and they wore moccasins, and a feather or two in their hats.

But even their hats were ordinary hats. Earle would certainly rejoice when they dressed up in all their war paint and costumes as they would do when they would have a big pow-wow later on.

Still, in the meantime, it was fun to get to know them as they were with the changes of time changing their ways, too. They even played baseball and got up a team to play against the white boys in the settlement. Those were the games when the Indians shrieked and yelled and the white boys did, too.

In fact, you could hardly tell which were Indians and which were white from the way they acted, only when one of the Indians disapproved of the umpire's decision about one of the points, he wanted to lasso the umpire, which was a little more than the white boys wished.

And Earle wrote home to the crowd that he was playing baseball against the son of an Indian chief, who showed his high rank by having a flagpole outside his hut—though no flag ever waved from its top!

Leisurely

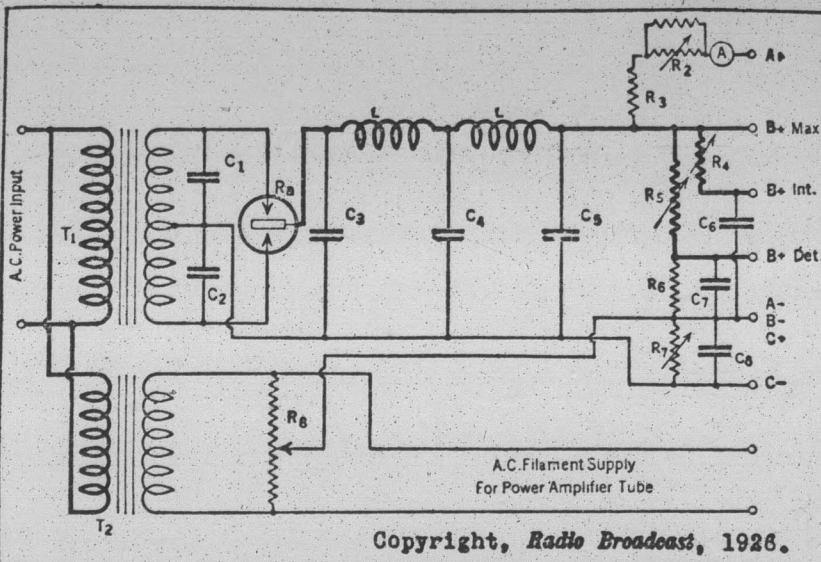

"What is your son going to be when he gets through college?"

"An old man, I'm afraid."

RADIO

The Complete Circuit Diagram for the "A," "B," "C" Line Supply Device Described Herewith.

The biggest difficulty to be overcome in obtaining "A" current from the house a. c. lighting supply is in finding a rectifier that will pass sufficient current for the filaments and yet make battery elimination an economical proposition. In the course of a description of an efficient "A," "B," "C" line supply device in the Radio Broadcast Magazine, B. F. Roland writes as follows: "A logical solution to the difficulties of 'A' power filtering is to connect the filaments of the radio tubes in series, thus reducing the overall current consumption."

"The accompanying diagram shows a unit which has been found entirely satisfactory for use in conjunction with a receiver employing 190 type tubes in series. Due to the fact that the current consumed is small, the filter-choke coils are of reasonable proportions. This device will supply voltages and currents as follows:

"A" battery—60 milliamperes, 6 to 30 volts.

"B" battery—Up to 25 milliamperes, at 200 volts, 90 (variable) volts, 45 (variable) volts.

"C" battery—From 0 to 50 volts.

"The use of the device is, of course, restricted to radio receivers employing tubes similar in characteristics to the UX-199 or DV-3 tubes with filaments wired in series, and under these conditions its performance as a universal power is ideal. The device illustrated is adaptable to any type of radio circuit and has been used with success on a three-circuit regenerative set, the Browning Drake, and tuned radio-frequency receivers, with variations of each type. Transformer-resistance or impedance-coupled amplifiers have been employed indiscriminately with equally good results.

The Power Transformer

"In the diagram, T₁ is a General radio power transformer designed for 50 watts, 110 volts, at full load. The high voltage secondary provides 350 volts each side of the tap at the center at no load. The third winding, T₂, provides 5 volts at 5 amperes for the 'raw' a. c. filament supply of an UX-112 or UX-171 power-amplifier tube. This may be supplied by a separate filament lighting transformer. In this construction, a Brach unit serves the purpose nicely. Across each half of the secondary, T₁, is connected a 0.1-microfarad buffer condenser, C₁ and C₂, of 1,000-volt flash test type. The outer ends of this winding are connected to the filament terminals of a standard UX type socket, into which is plugged the new type BH Raytheon rectifier, R₁, which is capable of passing 85 milliamperes. The plate terminal of the socket, corresponding to the cathode of the Raytheon tube, is connected to the plus side of the filter circuit. The filter circuit of this power unit includes choke coils, L, capable of passing 85 milliamperes direct current without heating, and having a residual inductance of at least 25 henries per choke at this value of direct current. The General Radio type 366 standard 'B' substitute choke is admirably suited for this service. Others which fulfill the above requirements will probably be equally as satisfactory.

"The voltage-control unit shown at the right-hand end of the diagram has been tried under all conditions, and has given good service. There was some difficulty in obtaining proper values and current-carrying capacities of the various resistors and, after considerable testing, the units specified were adopted. All of the parts in the control unit may be obtained from regular stock of the various manufacturers or their dealers. For the plate voltage of the power-amplifier tube, the maximum 'B' plus is taken directly from the terminals of the filter circuit. This terminal provides approximately 200 volts at full load. A clorostat, R₂, is used to control the voltage output of the next lower tap ('B' plus Int.) and will give from 90 to 135 volts approximately on the usual plate-current drain at this voltage. The 'B' plus detector tap is obtained through the use of another clorostat or a Bradleymohm No. 10, R. One-microfarad condensers are connected in both of these cases from the 'B' plus variable to 'B' minus to bypass rheostat noises, and to prevent undesirable coupling between the various amplifier stages.

"C" Battery Voltage.

"The 'C' battery voltage is obtained from a wire-wound variable resistance of the proper value. As this resistance carries the full-load current of the device, it must be designed to carry 70 to 85 milliamperes without change of resistance, and without excessive heating. If high 'C' voltages are desired, say up to 60 volts, the Federal No. 25 potentiometer is a good resistance to use here. It has a maximum resistance of 1,850 ohms, and will carry the full-load current fairly satisfactorily. A General Radio No. 214 potentiometer may be used in this position to supply 'C' voltage up to 34 volts, and does so with much less heating. An 11mf. condenser is connected from 'C' plus to 'C' minus to prevent undesirable coupling effects and distribution. If 60 volts 'C' bias are required and 85 milliamperes pass through the resistance supplying it, the power that must be taken care of is 5.1 watts.

"The a. c. filament winding, T₂, may not be available to the average constructor who may, however, have access to a 50-watt transformer having other satisfactory windings. In this case a Thordarson doorbell ringing transformer may be used to light the filament of the power amplifier tube. This transformer will be found to give the proper voltage without a filament rheostat for the UX-171 and UX-112 tubes, using the winding marked '6 volts.' A 400-ohm potentiometer, R₃, is connected across the 5-volt a. c. supply and the center tap is returned to the 'B' minus terminal of the supply unit. The adjustment of this potentiometer is very critical in order to eliminate all a. c. hum from this source. The 'A' plus terminal of the power supply is obtained by dropping the 'B' plus max. through a suitable rheostat to the required 'A' battery voltage. The resistance used in this position should have a range of from 3,000 to 5,000 ohms, and a current-carrying capacity of 60 milliamperes. As there was no rheostat of these requirements available, the writer used a combination of fixed and variable resistances to achieve the degree of control required. A fixed Ward Leonard 3,000-ohm unit was placed in series with a Ward-Leonard 5,000-ohm fixed resistor, around which was shunted a Federal No. 25 potentiometer."

Flexible Wire Handy When Experimenting

If you like to try occasional changes in your receiver, or if you want to experiment with temporary circuit arrangements or new instruments, you will find it convenient to keep a number of lengths of flexible insulated wire hanging from the side of your experimental table. The wires should be from six inches to two feet in length, and their ends equipped with small spring clips of the kind that look like tie clasps.

Ordinary single lamp cord, which costs about a cent a foot, is ideal for the purpose, as it combines mechanical strength with electrical utility. It is a good idea to buy a number of six-foot lengths in three or four colors of insulation and to cut up the different colored pieces into odd size. Then when you make a half dozen or so temporary connections and the wires cross each other or become otherwise entangled you will find it a simple matter to trace the circuit with the aid of the varicolored leads.

In fastening the ends of the wires to the clips twist them securely around the binding screws so that they will not fall out even if the screws themselves loosen. Of course the best idea is to solder the wires permanently in place, although it is desirable sometimes to remove a clip and to tighten the wire directly beneath an available binding post.

At any event, tape down the frayed ends of the insulation near the clips with narrow slices of ordinary white adhesive tape, so that the insulation will not run back and eventually bare the wire beneath to view. White adhesive tape is preferable to black friction tape because its outer surface is not sticky and does not tend to pick up dirt as easily as the latter material.

Strong small spring clips with tenacious jaws can be bought for less than five cents each in any radio store. Keep a box of them on hand; they are extremely useful for making quick, solderless connections and in holding two ends of wire together.

SCHOOL DAYS

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE POOR MILLIONAIRE

A MAN with many millions died the other day.

He was far from his native country, far from the real sources of his wealth, and with all his riches far from being happy.

This is what he said before he died: "My life was never destined to be quite happy. It was laid along lines I could not foresee. It left nothing to hope for, with nothing to seek or strive for. Inherited wealth is a great handicap to happiness. It is certain death to ambition."

If you read Plutarch's writings, and everybody should read them, you would be interested in his story of Alexander the Great, who was the son of Philip of Macedon.

When Alexander was a boy he was told of the great success his father was having in a war, of which he fought many. "My father will leave me nothing to do," was his comment. But when he arrived at age and began his own undertakings he so far outstripped his father's accomplishments as to entirely overshadow him.

That possibility rests in the hands of every young man who inherits great wealth. But the great majority of rich men's sons are not Alexanders. They are willing to spend, but not to earn. To distribute, but not to collect. To tear down, but not to build up.

But the son of the poor father has no other thing to do, if he does anything, but to build, to create, to construct.

It is a great advantage to the poor boy to have an outlet for his ambition.

It is a splendid thing that he has open fields for the exercise of his imagination. It is greatly to his benefit that he has to struggle to get on. Muscles that you do not exercise wither and become useless.

An imagination that isn't working dies of inactivity.

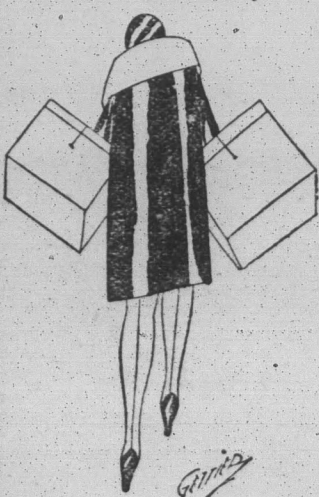

The poor boy can imagine a thousand things that the rich boy will never think about. His view is not obscured by blinding wealth.

The poor boy can work, and work is the greatest blessing in this life. No man intent on his work, interested in the results, is ever long unhappy.

If you have health, ambition and persistence you have all that is necessary to the greatest success that was ever attained. Never mind about the money. That will come in due time.

The Hotel Stenographer

"THERE are no secrets between my wife and me," boasted the House Detective.

"That's tough, Kelly," answered the Hotel Stenographer. "That's mighty tough on somebody."

"Either you are not very nice people or you never have any fun in your lives. If you were both so slow that you never did anything before you were married that you did not want to tell, you certainly must have led a mighty bum existence. No kisses in the back of a taxi, no sly bug on a straw ride, no holding of hands in the 'movies,' must have been a mighty stale life."

"If you both did all the things which normal humans do and told each other all about it after you got married, you were a mighty poor pair of sports, and it was tough on the people with whom you did these things."

"When I get married, Kelly, I shall either keep my mouth shut to my man about what I did before I met him or else lie to him like a lady. I can't be any fun for a man who loves a woman to hear the details of the other man who kissed his wife before he came on the scene. So if he is fool enough to insist on her telling him, there is only one thing for her to do as a good and dutiful wife who wants to make her husband happy, and that is to do what you and your wife did, lie to each other."

"Even so, Kelly, it is hard for a woman to tell a man she never had a sweetheart till he came on the scene and let him get the idea that he alone kept her from being an old maid. The best way is to lie to him till some time when you get mad at him and then tell him the truth just to take him down a peg like your wife will do to you some day."

Watermelon Is African

The watermelon is a native of Africa. It was early taken to India, as seems indicated by its having a Sanskrit name. It reached China about the Tenth century A. D. It has no name in the ancient Greek and Latin languages and was probably not known to these peoples much before the Christian era.

Wanted:—A Freckled Boy

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

PERHAPS it's my mistaken mind—But where have all the freckles gone?

I very seldom seem to find A youngster who has freckles on. Of course, you sometimes see a nose With six or seven, I suppose, But what I mean is freckles here, From chin to brow, and ear to ear.

Now, what is (as is often said) Worth doing is worth doing well! And freckles should be freely spread Around the face, I'm here to tell. If you possess a freckled face, Then have it freckled every place, So not a soul can doubt a lot If it's a freckled face or not.

There never was a freckled lad That other people didn't like. Another thing: he always had A name like Jimmy, Bill or Mike. You never saw an Algerian With very many freckles on, Or someone freckled who was called A Percival or Archibald.

But somehow, on the topmost branch, You always found the freckled kid. The roughest pony on the ranch. He said he'd ride, and ride he did. A freckled boy could climb and run And have a lot of freckled fun And catch more sunfish from a dock Than all the cherubs in the block.

So if you know (perhaps you do), The sort of youngster that I meant, I know a bank, a railroad, too. Both looking for a president. Of course, if freckles they employ, They'll start him in as office boy. But he'll be president in time—For freckled kids can always climb.

When we look into the long avenue of the future and see the good there is for each of us to do, we realize, after all, what a beautiful thing it is to work and live and be happy.—Steven-son.

CABBAGE WAYS

CABBAGE, like onions, is not favored because of its odor when cooked, but it is a wholesome vegetable both raw and cooked and contains valuable mineral salts needed in the blood.

The main reason we tire of different vegetables is that they are served so frequently in the same ways. If a change of serving and a little more care in cooking, these common vegetables would be more welcome.

Cabbage cooked with one onion, and served in a white sauce is a very good way.

Swedish Cabbage.

Boil in salted water for 20 minutes a dozen good-sized fresh cabbage leaves. Drain them and fill with the following mixture: A pound of beef chopped fine, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of cream, one-half teaspoonful of white pepper, one teaspoonful of salt, one of chopped parsley. Rub the dish with the cut side of a clove of garlic. Mix thoroughly and roll each leaf around a tablespoonful of the mixture; trim the ends neatly and tie or skewer. Lay in a dripping pan with a pint of stock or butter and water. Baste frequently, and bake for half an hour, or until tender. Remove the rolls, thicken with the gravy and pour over the cabbage.

Stuffed Cabbage.

Remove the stalk from a hard head of cabbage, tie in a cloth and cook until tender. Scoop out a cavity from the stem-end and fill with a stuffing of chopped meat, seasoned bread crumbs and butter. Bake in a hot oven until the cabbage is brown.

Hot Slaw.

Shred a head of cabbage and pour over the following dressing: Beat two egg yolks, add two tablespoonfuls of water, a dish of salt a tablespoonful of butter, and a cupful of mild vinegar. Cook this dressing over hot water and pour over the shredded cabbage while hot. Heat the cabbage and serve hot.

German Cabbage.

Slice red cabbage and let stand in cold water. Drain, and to one quart of cabbage add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of finely chopped onions, a few gratings of nutmeg and a bit of cayenne, cover and cook until the cabbage is tender. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one tablespoonful of sugar and cook five minutes.

Escalloped Cabbage.

Put layers of cooked cabbage and white sauce in a baking dish and sprinkle each with a light layer of snappy cheese. Bake until the buttered crumbs covering the top are brown, then serve at once.

Standard of Manhood

Man comes to himself only when he has found the best that is in him and has satisfied his heart with the highest achievement of which he is capable. That alone to him is the real measure of himself, the real standard of his manhood.—Grit.

Man's Face Mussed by Kick of Dead Cow

Sandusky, Ohio.—William L. Waldock is recovering from severe facial injuries received when he was kicked by a dead cow.

Waldock explained when questioned concerning a blackened and badly lacerated face, that with his father he was skinning the hind quarters of a beef when a hoof shot out, catching him squarely in the face.

The blow was so powerful that it sent him sprawling in a roadway freshly cindered.

KILLED GIRL FOR THRILL, SHE SAYS

Body of Victim Found in Sub-cellar.

Greenville, Tenn.—The coroner's jury found that twelve-year-old Novella Winkle, whose body was discovered in a subcellar of the Tipton home, had been murdered and directed that Bob Tipton, forty-three, and his wife, Alama Tipton, forty, be held without bail.

The woman told authorities first that she killed the child while her husband was at a store and gave jealousy as the cause. Later she said she had always wanted to kill just for the thrill of killing.

John Winkle, father of the child, believes she was struck in the head with an ax and that her throat was cut. He says the child was killed Friday, as tracks of a person, whom he thought was a man, following the girl to the woodpile, where blood was found, would have been obliterated by the heavy rain of last Thursday night. A blood-covered ax was found back of the woodpile.

Wounds on the back of the body and skull indicated to authorities that she was struck as she was trying to escape. Physicians said that cuts from a razor, though not deep enough to cause death, were found on the body.

Novella had been visiting in the Tipton home for two weeks before her disappearance.

Irsane Mother Wields Ax on Four Children

Jackson, Miss.—Mrs. Scott Allen, eighty-five years old, wife of a farmer, residing north of Moss in Jasper county, killed four of her own little children at the family home. An ax was used as the instrument of death and the heads of the children were nearly severed. Annie Belle McSullem, negress, residing on the place, saved the life of two other children.

"The Holy Ghost told me to kill them," was the reason the mother gave Jasper county officers for the deed. "I killed them so as not to be sinning against the Holy Ghost," she said.

Mrs. Allen was taken to Bay Springs and lodged in jail. The officers there believe she is insane. She is reported as calm and collected, apparently feeling that she has done her duty.

The little victims ranged in age from seven years to eight months. They were all playing about the yard when the tragedy took place. The child aged about seven was first felled with a blow on the head from the ax in the mother's hands. As the child lay stunned, she swung the ax blade across its neck and nearly severed the head.

Three other children were felled in quick succession, their skulls being crushed and death being instantaneous.

Mr. Allen, husband of the woman and father of the victims, was not at home at the time of the tragedy.

Names of the children and the order in which they were killed, obtained from Sheriff Williams at Bay Springs, follows: Sylvia Viola, six; Gladys May, four; Henry Simpson, three; and William Frazier, four months.

Bank Holdup Told Over Wire as It Proceeds

Dallas, Texas.—A shot-by-shot description of an attempted bank hold-up was received here over a telegraph wire from Clarksville, Texas, where two bandits were slain in a battle with officers. The telegraph wire of a Dallas cotton firm was clicking off quotations to the branch office in Clarksville when suddenly the receiving operator "broke."

"Just a minute," ticked the Clarksville operator, "there's a couple of guys robbing this bank."

The sending operator called to others in the Dallas office and they gathered around to hear the description. "They're sticking up the cashier," the instrument clicked.

"They've got a big bunch of jack—now they're leaving."

There was a moment's silence, then—"Lot of shooting out in front—one of the guys got his—they got the other one."

And then the Dallas operator resumed the cotton quotations.

$500 for a Heel

New York.—Here's a modern Achilles, who got $500 for his heel. Achilles Series, a steward, fell aboard ship and a knife severed the tendon achilles. He won a verdict against the steamship company.

Mrs. Furtado Makes Rapid Recovery

Sacramento Woman Suffering From After-Effects of "Flu," Nervous Exhaustion and Run-Down Condition, Recovers Perfect Health. Thanks Tanlac

The experience of Mrs. Mary Furtado, living at 2915 24th St., Sacramento, Cal., should be of interest to everyone suffering similar ailments.

When Mrs. Furtado was only 22, "flu" left her in a badly run-down condition. "I was in such a weak condition," says Mrs. Furtado, "that I couldn't do a thing. I was awfully thin, had no appetite whatever, and was so weak that I couldn't do my housework. My nerves were in a terrible state, everything worried me and I felt some days as if I would go to pieces."

"Tanlac certainly proved to be just what I needed. I not only gained 15 pounds in weight, but that tired, run-down feeling left me completely, my appetite improved wonderfully and the nervousness all disappeared. "I never felt better in my life than I did after taking Tanlac. I could do my housework and I felt just perfect. "Whenever I feel the least bit run-down or tired I always go back to Tanlac, for it never fails to build me right up."

Benefit by Mrs. Furtado's experience. Let this marvelous tonic made from roots, barks and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula, rebuild your run-down body, drive out pain and poison, give you robust health. Results from first bottle amazing. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today! Over 40 million bottles sold.

He Remembered

Two children, a brother and sister, had a dispute which ended in a fight. The little boy was on a visit to his aunt's, and, wishing to relate the affair, said: "Me and sister had a fight."

And the aunt asked: "Who whipped?"

The little fellow honestly answered: "Dad did!"

New Wage Solution

Chinese coolies in tea godowns pulled a new stunt in the history of labor movements during their recent strike when they kidnapped three of their employers in China, and taking them to a vacant lot, forced them to sign a bond acceding to their demands for an increase of 10 cents silver a day. More than 1,000 employees benefited by the action.

North America Sinking

Scientists say that the North American continent is slowly sinking into the ocean, the rate being about an inch a year. At any rate, however, the scientists say the change is nothing for anyone to become alarmed over, as changes of this kind have been noted with no cataclysmic effect on any considerable portion of the earth's surface since the time of recorded history.

South Converts Own Cotton

In 1860 the South used in its own industries 200,000 bales of cotton, but in 1925 the number of bales manufactured in sight of the cotton fields was 4,000,000, showing the tremendous increase in industrial activity in the South. Last year there were 17,000,000 active spindles in the southern mills against 16,000,000 active spindles in the North. In 1900 there were only 4,600,000 spindles in the South against 14,400,000 in the North.
